Limerick, Ohio

In the scenic hollows of southwestern Jackson Township lies the historic little town of Limerick. The drive to Limerick on Limerick Road (from Route 35) is a beautiful, and somewhat exciting drive. Two narrow lanes curve around hills and cliffs on one side, while overlooking meadows, pastures, thickets and creeks on the other. Homes are mostly scattered with small clusters here and there. Some of these residents are descendants of the early settlers who discovered this beautiful area. On a sunny day with blue skies, the drive to Limerick is a memorable experience.

While we could not find an exact date as to when the town was founded, the oldest tombstone that we were able to read in Limerick Cemetery dates back to 1817 to that of Thomas Vansky (whom we believe is a variation in spelling of the name Vanscoy), who died when he was 13 years old.

In 1820 census takers recorded only 54 families for all of Jackson Township. Some of these early surnames are seen in the Limerick Cemetery – Clark, Heartley (Hartley), Martin and Vanscoy. A decade later only 57 families were recorded, and in 1840 only 65 families were recorded. In this day of overpopulation and crowded suburbs, the area remains rural.

The Reorganized Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints has been active in Limerick since 1880, some of the early members buried in Limerick Cemetery.

The grocery store, owned by the late Harkless Witten and now managed by daughter Charlene and her mother Nettie, is the heart of Limerick. Neighbors and friends meet to buy gasoline and groceries, while seating on the front patio offers a place for visitors to sit and socialize for a while.

We first visited Limerick nearly eight years ago to visit and decorate the grave of little 2-year old Beulah Ann Longfellow who died of childhood diseases in 1928. She was the daughter of Sarah Murphy of Richmond Dale and William Franklin Longfellow of Columbus. We could not find her grave, but fell in love with the rolling hills and quiet hollows. Believing we had somehow missed Beulah Ann's tombstone we contacted the local trustees who told us there were no records of the old graves. We returned several more times over the years, enjoying the area, but not finding the grave.

Relentless we returned once again in 2005 and walked every inch of the cemetery discovering that quite a few of the stones were badly weathered and some could not be read at all. We decided to preserve the information on the tombstones by photographing them. We returned several times in 2006 to edit and take additional photographs. Some of these badly weathered stones can be read in the shade, others in the sun, and some could be read when we pulled up the photograph on the computer and enlarged and enhanced it.

This publication is meant, not only to preserve the tombstones' data and appearance, but as a guide for others searching for the gravesites of loved ones and ancestors. Some of the rows are irregular, so we call one row 9.5, between rows 9 and 10, with row one the row nearest to the road.

Although we may never know where in Limerick little Beulah Ann lies, we hope this work will enable families in the future to find an ancestor's grave even if the tombstone is unreadable. And don't be surprised if you see us nearby – we will visit frequently, enjoying the peace and the beauty of the area. We consider Limerick to be Ohio's best-kept secret!

Grocery store owner, the late Harkless Witten, in addition to being instrumental in the building of the Poplar Road Community Church, gave two interviews in the 1990's to the local newspaper about Limerick's history. Below is one of the interviews contributed by daughter Charlene.

Limerick — a glimpse of the motherland in Ohio

"Hurrah for Limerick!"
With that exclamation, a drunken Irishman named the little community for his home in Ireland. Or so the legend goes.

Limerick lies in the edge of Jackson Township, where Limerick Road (which goes through the village), Savageville Road, Sharonville Road, and Poplar Road meet. Ark Witten, owner of Witten Grocery, told about the present day village and reminisced about the stories he had heard about early Limerick...

Once a busy place, Limerick is home to approximately 30 families and has only one store now, Witten Grocery, two churches, Poplar Road Church and The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and the Limerick Grange, where the grange members began holding bean dinners in the 1880s, and still do, the third Saturday in August every year.

At one time, White's Mill, a water-powered grist mill, ground grains for the farmers who brought their produce to the mill by horse and wagon. It was about the only mill in Jackson County that would buy buckwheat for flour. White's Mill eventually moved to Athens.

Two blacksmiths plied their trade (in the shade of the spreading chestnut?), keeping the horses shod and making metal fixtures for the home and farm. A saloon provided libation for the men. The post office distributed the mail to the villagers. Two stores, Witten's Grocery and Rockwell's Store, offered goods for sale. A physician was available to attend the ill and the injured.

Just outside the village, in the foggy mists, scenes of Ireland could indeed be imagined. The shrouded valley, with shaggy cattle grazing; and the craggy hills looming above, could have been the stimulus for the shout by that homesick Irishman long ago.

Hurrah for Limerick!
